

WISER/NAPSA Just the Facts HEALTHCARE SCAMS

Introduction

Senior financial abuse scams are a multi-billion dollar "industry." Studies estimate the annual financial loss nationwide to be around $2.9 billion¹. In a recent New York State study, estimated annual losses for seniors in a subsample of New York State districts fell between $352 million to $1.5 billion, suggesting the national total may be substantially higher than previously estimated.² Although it can be difficult to measure the exact extent of the total financial loss, we know that these crimes are on the rise and continue to deprive seniors of their savings and assets. These figures do not account for the tens of billions spent on indirect costs for medical care, social services, and legal costs, or for the pain and suffering of the victims. Victims are not only older people, but also their families and all who provide services and financial assistance.

All seniors, regardless of income, are at risk. Financial abuse may be perpetrated by anyone—a professional con artist, a paid caregiver, a stranger or casual acquaintance, or even a son, daughter, or other family member.

The following factors contribute to the prevalence of senior financial abuse:

- ☒ A high percentage of seniors live alone and may be more vulnerable to scams.
- ☒ Seniors may be trusting and readily believe the sales "pitches" they hear.
- ☒ The population of seniors is increasing, providing a continuous source of wealth for financial abusers.

Education and awareness are two key strategies to preventing and responding to elder financial abuse. This brief describes common healthcare scams, and provides resources to keep seniors from becoming victims.

Educate Yourself and Others About These Healthcare Scams

Medicare Fraud

Since every U.S. citizen or permanent resident is eligible for Medicare at age 65, seniors are a prime target for Medicare fraud. These scams trick seniors into providing their Medicare or Social Security number, and include:

- ☒ The promise of free services or groceries
- ☒ Phony “health surveys”
- ☒ Submitting fraudulent bills for services or medical equipment and identity theft

Open enrollment season for Medicare is a time of increased scams, as Medicare beneficiaries can make changes to their health plan and prescription coverage. Scammers will pose as employees from the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) or other government agencies, claiming that new cards are being issued. Do not respond to these requests; the government will never solicit information over the phone or through email. Learn more at www.stopmedicarefraud.gov.

Health Insurance and Marketplace Scams

Scammers have taken advantage of changes in the Affordable Care Act—to falsely present themselves as government officials or healthcare providers looking to “verify” personal information, such as Medicare ID numbers, bank account numbers, or credit cards. Also, email “phishing” scams are being targeted at Marketplace.gov consumers. The phishing emails claim to come from a U.S. Federal Government Agency. Any effort to solicit information from you for your health care should be regarded as suspicious. Don’t respond to emails and hang up on the callers.

Counterfeit Prescription Drugs

Seniors often use the internet to look for better prices on prescription drugs. Scammers will offer “special low prices” on fraudulent drugs. Reputable online pharmacies will have the Verified Internet Pharmacy Practice Site (VIPPS) seal of approval—look for it. Scammers secure credit card numbers and may continue to charge and bill seniors for subsequent "purchases" they did not initiate. Many seniors are unaware of what they are being billed for and will continue to pay the charges.

Medical Discount Cards

Discount cards are a low-cost way to get needed medical care. Consumers typically pay a monthly fee and gain access to a large pool of primary physicians, eye doctors, pediatricians and other providers at a discounted price. Many discount medical cards are fraudulent. They provide fake lists of providers, phony discounts, and high fees that are not readily apparent and often mimic health insurance but provide no actual benefits. Learn more about spotting a phony card at www.insurancefraud.org, under scam alerts.

Funeral and Cemetery Scams

Scammers may read obituaries and contact the grieving widow or widower claiming the deceased had an outstanding debt with them. Another tactic of disreputable funeral homes is to insist that a casket, one of the most expensive parts of funeral services, is necessary, even in the case of cremation.

ADDITIONAL HELPFUL RESOURCES

Many public agencies are involved in preventing and detecting senior abuse and in prosecuting those who commit it. Many organizations are also dedicated to educating seniors on these topics:

National Adult Protective Services Resource Center

NAPSA, in partnership with the Administration for Community Living, operates the National Adult Protective Services Resource Center (NAPSRC). The Resource Center serves professionals from Adult Protective Services (APS) agencies across the United States. The goal of the Resource Center is to provide federal, state and local APS agencies with current, accurate, research based information and training, along with technical assistance to improve their capacity to provide effective protective services to vulnerable and elder adult abuse victims.

NAPSA also operates the National Institute on Elder Financial Exploitation (NIEFE), the first national clearinghouse to focus on the complex issues of elder financial abuse.
