Tactics

- Not a single incident; attack on person, their safety, control over any aspect of their life, values and beliefs
- Some violent some not.
- Violence is intermittent and in some ways unpredictable.
How Victims Respond to Abuser’s Tactics

- Many victims are not cognitively impaired or vulnerable so these cases may not come to APS.

- What do you do if a case comes to you and you find that person ineligible to your services?

- Effect of tactics is that abuser defines reality for victim and victim constantly assesses life in terms of anticipating and managing the abuser’s demands.
Barriers to Working With Victims
What Does Victim Want?

- Stop the abuse and violence
- May not want to end the relationship
- May be unable to end the relationship
- Goals may not be what systems want
What Does Victim Want?

- Not want to see spouse, child or grandchild arrested, charged, or incarcerated
- Offender may be source of income and/or caregiver for victim
- Victim may be caregiver for perpetrator
- Fear loss of connection with grandchildren or community
- Fear bringing disrespect on greater community
- Fear of being judged by responders (gay, lesbian, transgender, bisexual, immigrants, limited English)
- What other reasons in your community?
Victim Responses

Some responses may be hard to understand

☐ Take abuser’s side, not report, recant, reject APS offers of service

☐ Return to the abuser and the relationship

☐ Not speak with responders

☐ Minimize what has happened
Institutional Responses to Victims

- Historical trauma/ cultural & racial issues
- Religious beliefs and teachings
- Criminal Justice and Court Responses
- Resulting in beliefs not be believed or helped or help will be worse than the situation
Possible Benefits of MR

- May increase number of cases identified and reported
- If victim cannot report authorities can be notified
- Takes responsibility off victim to initiate a report
- May be additional services and resources for APS clients
- Other
Possible Problems with MR

- Not what the victim may want (self-determination and autonomy), especially if victim has decisional capacity
- Victim does not control what happens and who is informed
Possible Problems with MR-2

- May be a hollow promise and actually increase danger
  - Inadequate services
  - Create expectations that cannot be met
  - APS/LE may not understand ALL/DVLL
  - APS/LE policies may increase danger—mandatory arrest, requirement that worker notify alleged perpetrator of allegation and interview or requirement that APS notify perpetrator of investigative conclusions and findings
DV Programs and MR

- Are you mandated reporters of EA/VAA?
  - If so, how communicate that information to clients?
    - Ethical communication
  - If everyone a mandated reporter or just some staff (e.g., by licensure)?
    - Policy who does interviews and who reports
APS Concerns with MR

- Duty to cross report to LE suspected crimes?
  - Not what client wants
  - Safety concerns
  - Barrier to gaining client trust and building an effective relationship with client?
Working with Victims/Clients/Survivors

- In domestic and sexual violence movements described as “empowerment”
- In APS described as “self-determination”
- Both built on principle of listening to victims and recognizing a victim’s strengths
APS and DV Programs Working Together

- Are there positive relationships? What do we have in common?
- Are APS and DV Programs referring to each other?
- Are there opportunities for Cross-Training?
Common Ground

- Focus on victim safety
- Wanting a better life for the victim
- Wanting the abuse to stop
- Wanting to improve current responses
Victim-Centered Approach

- Respect victim confidentiality and privacy
- Keep focused on victim safety and offender accountability
- Avoid assumptions about what is best for the victim
- Take direction from victim
- Work together to overcome barriers and obstacles
Benefits of Different Approaches

- More complete picture
- Victim autonomy and safety
- Coordination of services
- Provides more resources and less duplication of services
- More holistic approach
- Overcome agency limitations
Working with Clients to Enhance Safety

- DV Approach: Believe the Client
  - Empowerment Model
  - Victim/Client-Centered and Directed
    - Do not tell client what to do; non-judgmental; not an investigation
    - Victim knows what is best in situation based on experience, values, beliefs
    - Victim has to live with consequences
DV Approach: Believe the Client-2

- Strengths-based
  - Problem-solving focus
  - Recognizes that clients are strong and resilient and able to make/accept changes
  - Victims have lived with this for a long time and have developed coping strategies
    - What have you tried? What worked? What has not?
    - Who can you call if you need help?
APS Approach: Investigate Reports of Suspected Abuse

- Independent investigations
- Confidential privileged relationships, subject to laws imposing limitations
- May not be empowerment model
- Time constraints per code/policy (Short term) involvement vs open ended
- Knowledge of aging/disability population
- Environmental focus
- Crisis based—can be similar for DV
Safety Planning

- May have different meanings for APS and DV
  - Safety is served when both working in sync
  - Both approaches are valuable
  - Cross training and MOUs
- APS does not have same level of confidentiality as DV advocates so it may be preferable to have safety planning done by DV advocates where victim’s confidences are more protected from disclosure
Conclusion

- Collaboration and coordination
  - What has worked for your community?
  - What models are out there?
